

AAPI DISCUSSION GUIDE & ANTI-RACISM RESOURCES FOR PIPPA PARK RAISES HER GAME BY ERIN YUN

★ SECTION 1: ASIAN AMERICAN PACIFIC ISLANDER EXPERIENCES

The following section can be used to discuss Asian American Pacific Islander experiences and key terms involved in this discussion.

1. Define the term BIPOC, pronounced “bye-pock.” BIPOC stands for Black, Indigenous, and people of color. This term is specific to the United States and is intended to center the experiences of Black and Indigenous groups and demonstrate solidarity between communities of color.
2. Define the term Asia. Asia refers to the largest of the seven continents, which spans around 16 million square miles.¹ The United Nations estimates that the population of Asia is around 4.3 billion people and recognizes five regions of Asia (Central, Eastern, Southeastern, Southern, Western) and 48 countries within those regions.² Ask students if they can list 5–10 Asian countries.
3. Define the term AAPI and refer to the US Census Bureau’s definition of Asian and Pacific Islander.³ Ask students what comes to mind when they think of the term AAPI and what figures and examples in the media stand out most to them (films, songs, movie stars, scientists, authors, athletes, etc.).
4. Define the term Model Minority Myth. Model Minority refers to a minority group or a member of a group stereotypically viewed as being more successful than other minorities.⁴ The Model Minority Myth is the harmful perception of universal success among Asian Americans. This myth erases the differences among individuals, ignores the diversity among Asian Americans, operates alongside the myth of Asian Americans as perpetual foreigners, and wrongly implies racism against Asian Americans does not exist.⁵ It’s also harmful to the struggle for racial justice, as it can be used to downplay racism against other marginalized groups.

Some examples of the Model Minority Myth include assumptions that all Asian Americans:

- Excel at STEM-related and musical fields (for example, a student who is great at math and playing the violin).
- Work hard but are shy, quiet, and unable to hold leadership positions (for example, a student who does all the work in a group project but does not hold any decision-making power over the group).
- Experience a higher degree of socioeconomic success than the population average (for example, a student who is economically well-off, never breaks the rules, and has a stable and unproblematic family life).
- Are law-abiding citizens who have adhered to the rules of the American system, and if other groups work harder and overcome oppression, they too would succeed (for example, a student who is labeled the “class pet” or used by their teacher as an ideal that other students—often BIPOC students—should strive to emulate).

★ SECTION 2: PIPPA PARK'S PERSONAL LENS

The book discusses the AAPI and Korean immigrant experience through the lens of Pippa Park. Ask students how Pippa's experience as an Asian American girl has informed her decision-making throughout the book.

1. When Pippa gets a basketball scholarship to attend Lakeview, she doesn't tell her new classmates that her family owns a Korean laundromat. Why do you think Pippa feels pressured to hide this part of herself? How does this affect her self-worth and her relationship with others?
2. Before Pippa starts at Lakeview, she reads Tween Things, which has a gorgeous blond girl pouting on the cover. What made her want to buy the magazine? How do you think the cover of the magazine made Pippa feel?
3. Why is it so important for Pippa to pay Helen back for the manicure even though Helen could afford to pay for Pippa? How does the value of money change depending on who has it?
4. Chuseok is mentioned many times throughout the story and is an important part of Pippa's culture (see Korean Language Glossary on pages 274–275). Chuseok is the Korean version of Thanksgiving, and Pippa's family asks her to invite her new friends over to celebrate. Why doesn't she?
5. What are some of the Korean dishes you noticed Pippa eating or talking about, and how do these dishes inform your perceptions and understanding of Pippa's cultural background?
6. What have you learned about the AAPI experience from reading Pippa's story? Why do you think diversity matters in books as well as other forms of media?

★ SECTION 3: BULLYING AND MICROAGGRESSIONS

The following section can be used to discuss a specific type of bullying that minorities, including Asian Americans, experience: microaggressions. Students can discuss what microaggressions are and how these instances are represented in the book with specific examples.

1. What is bullying? Bullying is defined as the abuse and mistreatment of someone vulnerable by someone stronger or more powerful.⁶
2. What is a microaggression? A microaggression is defined as a comment or action that subtly expresses a prejudiced attitude toward a member of a marginalized group (such as a racial minority).⁷ This can be conscious or unconscious, and intentional or unintentional.
3. Discuss the following examples of microaggressions Pippa experienced in the book:
 - A student in Pippa's class says, "Aren't Asians supposed to be good at math?" What makes this comment a microaggression?
 - Eliot ignores Pippa when he sees her at the diner. Pippa thinks it's because she has runny orange butterscotch on her lips after eating hot fudge. Do you think there are other reasons why Eliot pretends he doesn't know her?
 - When Pippa eats kimchi during lunch at Lakeview, Olive comments on the smell. Why do you think Olive made that comment and how does it affect Pippa throughout the rest of the book?
 - Evelyn tells Pippa that Eliot is a "Haverford" and that "being a Haverford means something." Besides the fact that Eliot is a Haverford, what other reasons might Evelyn have for discouraging Pippa from dating Eliot? How does Pippa react?

■ When Pippa tells the Royals that her mom is in the hospital, Starsie says, "I'm sure there are really good doctors in Seoul. My dentist is Korean—he's great." Why do you think Starsie mentioned that her dentist is Korean? What are Starsie's intentions and how does this comment make Pippa feel?

4. Ask students about other examples of microaggressions that they noticed in the book as well as types of microaggressions and/or bullying that they might have experienced in their daily lives and the emotional reactions that they've had.

The discussion questions in this guide were written by Erin Siu. Erin Siu is a children's publishing editor who works on picture books, middle-grade and young adult books, and graphic novels. She's originally from California but now calls New York City home. She is a mentor for The People of Color in Publishing Mentorship Program and was an original grant recipient of We Need Diverse Books.
